COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course is based on reading and responding to the top-rated and inspiring resource book How to Teach so Students Remember by Marilee Sprenger, published by The Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development (ASCD), 2nd Ed, in 2018. (Ordering information is listed at the end of the syllabus.) Learn teaching strategies that give students the best possible chance to form meaning and remember things that are important academically. The book is one of the best written how-to books, revealing seven interesting strategies and giving recent research validating each. There is a lively introduction with an overview of the whole book, and a hint at the great strategies that would lie ahead. The appendices at the end of the book give a Brain Briefing and a rich and varied catalog of interesting graphic advanced organizers.

The author, Marilee Sprenger, has the excellent combination of teaching experience and a keen grasp of the research that clarifies best practice in the real world of accountability that students are facing in high-stakes tests. She has already written three other successful teaching books, including Becoming A Wiz at Brain-based Teaching, published by Corwin Press.

LEARNING OUTCOMES: Upon completion of this course, participants will have:

1. A fresh, clear explanation of how to organize their teaching for powerful student processing and access to recall, using a seven-step program.
2. A resource that is, itself, organized for memorable reflection and recall, so strategies can be tried and retained after the book is read.
3. The connection for students between conceptual learning and their access to recall.
4. A range of approaches that will address different student strengths in acquiring and retaining meaningful information.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

Completion of all specified assignments is required for issuance of hours or credit. The Heritage Institute does not award partial credit.

Group participants can only view and respond to their group members in the Forum.

Assignment #1: Introduction.

Briefly introduce yourself and explain your interest in the topic.

Look to the seven steps of the learning/memory cycle. Which steps are part of your usual repertoire and which would you like to learn more about?

Assignment #2: Some Strategies.

From Chapter 1: "Reach" What are the attention and motivational strategies listed in this chapter? Provide examples of two ways you do, or could, use the strategies listed in this chapter.

OR: In the introduction to a new unit, give an example of how you do, or could, help students connect their lives to the academic goals.

Assignment #3: Reflect, Wait Time, and Reflective Collaboration .

From Chapter 2: "Reflect" When you give yourself time to reflect? Can you see a difference in the retention of information when you allow your students to reflect?

OR: "Wait Time" Give some evidences that Wait Time improves thinking. Since Wait Time can initially be uncomfortable, what is a strategy you can use to teach Wait Time to your students?

OR: "Collaboration & Reflection" Most of us are content-driven. Collaboration and reflection are time-consuming teaching strategies, and yet they are important. Share how you can incorporate collaboration and reflection by giving an example from something you've done or could do.

Assignment #4: Recode

From Chapter 4: About Recoding

Explain recoding. Why is it important for students to choose their best method for recoding? Give an example of how you could, or did, enable student to do recoding.

Assignment #5: Reinforce
From Chapter 4: "Reinforce"

Assessment is feedback. What types of feedback are described in this chapter? Given the fact that no teacher has time to give meaningful feedback to every student on all assignments, to avoid "extinction," what alternatives does a teacher have to give students some chance at feedback?

Assignment #6: Rehearse and Homework
From Chapter 5 "Rehearse:

The author introduces five pathways (lanes) to imprint a memory and states that we may overuse the semantic lane in school. Give an example of one of the other four lanes which you may use.

OR: "Homework"

Give an example of a homework assignment that requires upper level thinking.

Assignment #7: Review
From Chapter 6: "Review"

Without review, most information will be lost from memory. Examine your review practices for your assessments. Please give an example of how you create reviews to encourage transfer and/or support permanent memory.

Assignment #8: Retrieve
From Chapter 7: "Retrieve"

Share three ways you can engage students in their own assessment?

OR: "Better Planning"

From Chapter 7: When retrieval fails, what might be the reason in your planning and/or presentation? Using information from the whole chapter about problems with retrieval, what can you do to help students retrieve the key learning objectives?

Assignment #9: Realization
From Chapter 8: "Realization"

Now that you understand the seven steps to improve memory, which one would be most useful to teach your class so that they are better at retrieval? How might you help them with this step?

Assignment #10: Using the Appendices
Appendix A: "Brain Briefing"

Describe how survival, novelty and/or choice have fit into your classroom strategies to help students remember information.

OR: Appendix B: "Graphic Organizers"

Consider the graphic organizers in this appendix. Select three of these organizers that would work well in the context of your class, and give an example. (Remember that it is important to use a variety of organizers, because organizers lose their novelty when overused.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HOW TO TEACH SO STUDENTS REMEMBER

BOUSHEY, G., MOSER, J. The Cafe Book. Portland, ME: Stenhouse Publishers. 2009. This book shows teachers how to use effective strategies to increase Comprehension, Accuracy, Fluency and Expand vocabulary (CAFE) in the classroom. These strategies help with both reading and writing instruction.

COSTA, Arthur L, and KALLICK, Bena, Discovering & Exploring Habits of Mind, pb, 106 pages, ASCD. 2000. This is the beautiful introduction to the list of 16 types of intelligent behavior that Costa and Kallick have termed "habits of mind." In this book, you will find out what are these 16 indicators of intelligence, and find a visual icon for each. (There is also a website with famous quotations for each of these habits of mind.) At the end of the book you'll find exciting and inspiring ways for teachers to teach directly what these habits of mind are for students, in many creative and motivating strategies to deeply process their appeal and power. My favorite is "managing impulsivity." Intelligent, indeed!

ERLAUER, Laura, The Brain-Compatible Classroom: Using What We Know About Learning to Improve Teaching, pb, 168 pages, ASCD. 2003. This book begins with "A Walk Through the Brain," and includes seven chapters explaining the seven most important components of a brain-compatible approach. Examples show how to put them into place at different grade levels and in different subject areas. At the conclusion of the book, there is a challenge to make the move to help make your school, or even district, commit to putting these powerful tools into practice! It provides clarity and inspiration to help you test your practice to align it with realities of the truths about human learning.

ERWIN, Jonathan C. 2004. The Classroom of Choice, Giving Students What They Need and Getting What You Want, Alexandria, VA. ASCD. 229 pages.

ISBN 0-87120-829-6 Based on Glasser's beliefs that people have these motivators: fun, freedom, power and belonging. Give students choices, and they will pick what meets an unmet need. It is rich and wonderful, full of practical and engaging strategies to achieve important intellectual goals while helping students meet their developing social and intellectual needs. Erwin believes that while learning is hard work, it doesn't have to be painful: Fun is both a prerequisite for and a byproduct of quality learning.

FERLAZZO, Larry. Helping Students Motivate Themselves: Practical Answer to Classroom Challenges, 2nd. edition. Larchmont, CA. Eye on Education. 190 pages. 2013. ISBN 978-1-59667-181-2. Find a dozen categories of strategies to engage the thinking and processing of your course information. In this book by award-winning author Larry Ferlazzo, you will see: How to motivate students, help students to take personal responsibility, deal with disruptive students and classes, find best ways to maximize the chances that a lesson will be successful, and more. Each section of the book provides stimulating ideas and down-to-earth tools, including lesson plans, and even downloads of the handouts that save you hours.

FERLAZZO, Larry. Self-Driven Learning: Teaching Strategies for Student Motivation, Eye on Education, Larchmont, NY, 208 pages, 2013.

ISBN13-9780-1-59667--239-0 and Building a Community of Self-Motivated Learners: Strategies to Help Students Thrive in School and Beyond, 2015, Routledge, NY, 199 pages. ISBN 978-0-415-74666-3. After the huge popularity of Helping Students Motivate Themselves, Larry Ferlazzo has continued his contribution to our efforts to awaken and empower students out of their lethargy. In both books there are more complete lesson plans that will capture your students' focus, self-interest, curiosity, and skills needed both in school and out of school. All the lesson plans are correlated to the Common Core ELS/Literacy Standards. Most lessons are targeted to secondary students, because research shows that the teen years are open to influence and life learning.
